

The New York Times

Published: March 28, 1970

By GRACE GLUECK

Edith Schloss (Green Mountain Gallery, 17 Perry Street): These sophisticatedly childlike paintings and water-colors were done on the Italian bay of La Spezia (famous for Shelley's drowning). They celebrate classic pleasures—calm sea, light sky, the vista of a tiny off-shore island. Miss Schloss "anchors" her pictures by a clever if somewhat repetitive device—Morandi-like rows of objects in the foreground. They include bottles, jars, flowers, and a strange, recurrent image that could be a phallic butterfly. Her colors—whites, blues, reds, pinks, yellows—are as brightly ingenuous as her style. An enchanting show. Last day.